

Kim Day
Chief Executive Officer
Denver International Airport

Kim Day has led Denver International Airport (DEN) as CEO since April 2008. DEN is the nation's fifth-busiest airport and the region's most powerful economic engine, generating more than $33 billion annually.

She is leading a $3.5 billion capital improvement project that includes the expansion of DEN's concourses and redevelopment of the iconic, tented Jeppesen Terminal. Under her guidance, DEN has built a robust network of over 200 non-stop destinations served, including an ever-growing list of international cities.

With more than 35 years of experience, Ms. Day previously served as executive director of Los Angeles World Airports. After receiving a Bachelor of Architecture degree from Cornell University, Ms. Day practiced architecture in the private sector for more than 20 years.
