

Leah Wandera is a Kenyan, currently pursuing her master's in public health at University of Nebraska Medical Center. She holds a master's degree Divinity-social justice advocacy and a BS. in Project Planning and Management. She is an advocate for girls and women's rights with a focus on culture, education and health- advocating to end harmful cultures and support girls and women to pursue higher education and access health care services. Leah is a founder of WemaHealth Foundation- Kenya and she has also worked with other NGO's including Hope Foundation for African Women. Her advocacy work as a young woman has seen her work with girls and women from six different countries of Africa.