

As President of Capitalize Albany Corporation and CEO of the City of Albany Industrial Development Agency and Capital Resource Corporation, Sarah leads the City of Albany's economic development efforts through transformational real estate development, targeted business and project assistance, and strategic planning. Sarah has worked in community redevelopment for more than a decade, previously serving as Principal Planner for the City of Albany specializing in neighborhood revitalization, plan implementation and community engagement.

Sarah is active in the community and serves as a board member for several organizations, including the Albany Convention Center Authority, and sits on a number of community advisory committees. She holds a master's degree from the University of Miami and bachelor's degrees from Syracuse University. She lives in Albany with her husband and two children