Sunny Burns
Vice President for Learning and Student Success
Pierce College Fort Steilacoom

I realize in our large region that some of you may not have even noticed Springtime creeping up on us, because your weather is already so wonderful. There's that old adage from my little slice of paradise in Washington state that we know when summer is approaching because the rain is warmer!

I'd like to continue the "seasons" theme, skipping Winter, that is! Springtime is the time of awakening, planting, growing, and a time of increased energy. Time to shake off the winter resting time and begin anew. How can we use this time of year?? What's interesting for me is that in our academic cycle, this is our time to finish things: graduation ceremonies, favorite work study students leaving, closing down the term and year data, saying goodbye to many faculty until Fall, and generally gearing down a bit for the summer season (that is, except for the financial aid folks, who crank up their work schedule!). So how can the Springtime theme fit? I propose that Spring term is a good time to sit down with your staff and list all your year's accomplishments—butcher paper is good—make the letters big and important! List everything—even the little improvements in processes which have resulted in positive service for our students and faculty. From that list, ask them to identify which ones are finished, so you can celebrate that event. Plan how you will celebrate the "finished" list and actually do it!! Then ask "Which of these positive moves do we want to grow?" What little seed of success could be viewed as a mini-pilot for expanding upon? Don't forget to use your networking system of PACRAO to tap some of your colleagues and find out how others have implemented that idea—we are all in a continuous improvement cycle!

Then use some fresh paper and list ideas you would like to plant to grow over the Summer, harvesting them next Fall. A good prompt is to ask "If you had unlimited time, what is near the bottom of your to-do list that you really want to get done, but can't seem to carve out the time?" Another is "What ONE improvement would make your job easier?" (you can get a little silly on this one) If you have a long list, use "dot voting" (give each person four colored dots to stick next to their favorite ideas—all four on one idea, if they want!) to identify the items to focus upon. Usually in a list of fifteen or so items, a pretty clear pattern of three or four items will emerge. For each of chosen items, identify the challenge in outcomes terms, list strategies to achieve the outcome, create a timeline, and write a clear method of assessment of the outcome. For example, an outcome might be: Northwest Community College admission office will increase student access by offering WEB admissions to prospective students by the end of Spring Quarter 2003. Strategies to achieve this could be: Research platforms available (Summer 2002), Choose system (Fall 2002), Design Page (Fall 2002), Pilot Test (Winter 2003), Implement full project (Spring 2003). FERPA Training Made Simple

As the Assistant Registrar for Training & Communication Services at UCLA, PACRAO President-Elect Clifford A. Ramirez developed a 4-hour FERPA training workshop he called "Managing the Privacy of Student Records." Regularly presented at UCLA, the critically acclaimed workshop has been brought to PACRAO twice by the Diversity Development Committee—in July 2000 and in October 2001.

The success of "Managing the Privacy of Student Records" has been capped this year by the release of two books from LRP Publications. Both books have been authored by Cliff and are based upon his workshop.

Cliff wrote "Managing the Privacy of Student Records: A Textbook of FERPA Basics" from the participant materials he developed for the workshop. The "Textbook" serves as the in-class participant workbook, but can also function as an independent study aid for staff members unable to attend a FERPA training session.

"Managing the Privacy of Student Records: The Leader's Guide" is the teaching manual for Cliff's workshop. Hoping to contribute to the efforts of colleagues charged with FERPA training responsibilities, Cliff developed this facilitator's manual, filling it with scripts, training pointers, facilitator notes, handouts, and even overheads. "The Leader's Guide" is the workshop in an all-inclusive package, allowing trainers to deliver "Managing the Privacy of Student Records" at their own campuses, utilizing the "Textbook" as a participant workbook.

Both of the publications are available from LRP Publications at (800) 341-7874 or through the Online Catalog at the LRP Publications website (lrp.com). You might even consider urging your campus bookstores to stock the "Textbook" for the convenience of your campus staff.

PACRAO Professional Development Committee

On behalf of the professional development committee of PACRAO, I am delighted to tell you about two exciting summer workshops for our membership -

Workshop 1

The IPI Factor - Ease and Effectiveness in Workplace Communication

What is IPI?

The degree to which employees are effective and satisfied in the workplace depends on their task and transactional abilities. How they perform their tasks - deliver services or products - depends on their knowledge, training and experience. How effective they are in transactional dealings - relating to and communicating with others - depends largely on their interpersonal intelligence, the "IPI factor".

What will the workshop cover?

This interactive workshop focuses on building awareness and skills that will increase the IPI factor for participants and enable them to approach interpersonal and communication difficulties in the workplace with new tools, confidence and effectiveness.

What will participants leave with?

An increased level of IPI and with simple, effective skills and strategies that will be immediately applicable to interpersonal and communication challenges in the workplace.

Facilitator - Marjorie Anderson, Ph.D.

Dr Anderson is Director of Communication Programs in the Faculty of Management at the University of Manitoba. She has a Ph.D. in English Literature and has taught Writing, Communication and English Literature both in the English department and the Faculty of Business. She has conducted faculty workshops on communication skills, coached MBA teams for international competitions and co-edited with Carol Shields the national best-selling book, Dropped Threads. Marjorie has been awarded the Faculty's Achievement Award for excellence in teaching.

can we measure the success? Assessment is merely checking to see if you achieved what you set out to do, so one method to assess the website, is to ask, "Does the Website work?" Tracking comments and complaints through an email contact can give feedback. A qualitative assessment might be to track how many students use the website versus using other methods (mail, drop-in) of admissions processes. Using existing baseline data, and tracking use over time can determine if this project was a success. After a period of assessment, then you and your staff can look at the data to determine whether the initial project needs some refinement or scrap the whole thing!!

What I've just described is continuous improvement; this is what our accrediting bodies are looking for throughout our institutions!

What a garden of fruitful projects we can grow with a little planning, nurturing, and attention! I will be excited to hear about your successes in November—Please bring them with you to share with your colleagues!

Remember: Put PACRAO –Victoria 2002 —November 4-7, 2002 on your calendars now!!
